

Announcing . . .

ENGAGING the CIVIL WAR

Engaging the Civil War, a series edited by the founders of the Emerging Civil War blog group, adopts the sensibility and accessibility of public history while adhering to the standards of academic scholarship. To engage readers and bring them to a new understanding of America's great story, series authors draw on insights they gained while working with the public—walking the ground where history happened at battlefields and historic sites, talking with visitors in museums, and educating students in classrooms. With fresh perspectives, field-tested ideas, and in-depth research, volumes in the series connect readers with the story of the Civil War in ways that make history meaningful to them while underscoring the continued relevance of the war, its causes, and its effects. All Americans can claim the Civil War as part of their history. This series helps them engage with it.

For more information, please contact siupresspublicity@siu.edu or emergingcivilwar@gmail.com

A new series from Southern Illinois University Press and the editors of the Emerging Civil War blog

Chris Mackowski and Kristopher D. White, series editors

Advisory Board Members

James J. Broomall, Shepherd University
Brian Matthew Jordan, Sam Houston State University
Derek Maxfield, Genesee (NY) Community College
Kelly D. Mezurek, Walsh University
Julie Mujic, Sacred Heart University
Terrienne Schulte, D'Youville College
Matthew E. Stanley, Albany State University (Georgia)

Submission guidelines available at
[https://emergingcivilwar.com
/submission-guidelines](https://emergingcivilwar.com/submission-guidelines)

SIU SOUTHERN ILLINOIS
CARBONDALE UNIVERSITY PRESS

www.siupress.com

EMERGING
CIVIL WAR

<https://emergingcivilwar.com>

